Introduction:

This comprehensive financial intelligence for HR professionals course is designed to enhance the financial literacy of HR professionals by incorporating key financial principles and skills relevant to their roles within the organization.

Participants will learn to apply financial accounting and management skills within HR. The financial intelligence for HR professionals course covers various financial domains pertinent to HR, combining hard financial skills with soft skills in finance to provide a robust learning experience for HR professionals.

Most organizations' planning and budgeting process starts with the human resources HR department. At the same time as the sales and marketing professionals are assessing product and service mix and making short and long-term forecasts of sales demand and prices, the HR department is assessing its current level of resources and the likely level of resources required both in the short and longer term.

The HR function plays an integral role in budgeting costs for the whole organization. It is also responsible for the preparation and management of its departmental budget. It is accountable for the achievement of that budget. Financial awareness is, therefore, an essential requirement for every role at every level within the HR departments of modern business organizations.

Companies increasingly integrate all their business processes using systems like ERP enterprise resource planning. Each business function should therefore understand, and be able to communicate accounting and financial and non-financial information.

This financial intelligence for HR professionals course provides financial awareness and practical application for HR practitioners to appreciate accounting and finance in the broader context, the HR function's involvement in the organization's budgeting and budgetary control processes, and participation in decision-making.

The financial intelligence for HR professionals course also includes the techniques required to prepare a detailed budget for the HR department and manage its actual budget performance.

Finance for HR Professionals:
