Introduction:

Recovery and resolution are two critical international work streams that address the risks posed by globally systemically important financial institutions. This Bank Recovery and Resolution Directive BRRD course aims to cover the key issues, tools, and techniques used to create and manage an RRP and the real-life challenges financial institutions face in the RRP process.

Recovery and Resolution Planning RRP rules are being implemented globally following the credit crisis and subsequent government rescue of failing financial institutions. These rules require banks, building societies, and investment firms to produce a Recovery plan and Resolution pack.

What is the Bank Recovery and Resolution Planning BRRP?

Bank Recovery and Resolution Planning BRRP is a critical framework for ensuring financial stability by preparing banks to manage potential crises effectively. It encompasses strategies and procedures designed to mitigate risks and manage distress situations within financial institutions. BRRP focuses on establishing robust mechanisms that enable banks to recover from financial distress without disrupting financial markets or requiring taxpayer bailouts.

This planning involves comprehensive assessments, contingency measures, and regulatory compliance to safeguard depositor funds and maintain market confidence. BRRP training equips banking professionals with the necessary skills to navigate complex scenarios and uphold financial stability through proactive planning and decisive action.
