Successful People Management Course for Problems at Work

Introduction

In today's rapidly changing work environment, effectively managing people and workplace problems is invaluable, making this successful people management course an essential foundation for anyone looking to enhance their managerial competencies.

Why can't people leave their problems at the front gate?

People's problems can include work-related stress, marriage problems, lack of motivation, work stress, long work hours, turnover, under-staffing, nationalization, bullying, and job insecurity, all of which impact an employee's health and performance. The cost to the employer can be enormous. No matter your industry, stress at work can be an authentic and overwhelming experience.

The amount of employees suffering from stress and stress-related illnesses is rapidly rising. More than half 53% of people at work have suffered stress in the past 12 months, while one in four people had taken time off sick through stress in the previous year, according to the latest research by the International Stress Management Association.

This successful people management course allows participants to critically analyze their HR approach to managing people's problems in the workplace and develop plans to manage this vital workplace issue.

Managing people's problems at work is a critical skill for all people managers and HR professionals.
